

INSTITUTIONAL PERSPECTIVE PLAN & DEPLOYMENT

We envision to prepare our students for the challenges of the 21st century. The unprecedented changes that this century has witnessed eggs us to fortify our students with 21st century skills. Our faculty members excel in the art and science of teaching, research and counseling. We look forward to promoting concept -based curriculum and instruction rather than fact-based teaching. This would make learning more fluid and automatic and a permanent repertoire. Our teachers will keep learning about new educational theories and practices and help increase interconnectedness. Theories are ever changing and as teachers we would determine how superior theories would be advantageous for our students. We would create educators that impact the lives of students and are themselves willing to grow. The educators should themselves be incensed with a burning desire to bring about an impact upon the students. We would strategically plan for the long term benefit of the institution and ensure that we tap into the resources of every faculty and student. Every student is a unique learner and their style of learning can create richer learning experiences for all. As students are inquirers, they question and create their own interpretations which would lead to knowledge building. We would enrich the learning environment by depending upon the social and cultural capital of students.

We at PGDAV College strongly believe and will keep believing in preparing students as rational thinkers, able to take ideas and either make them their own or discard them. Our students will also be more compassionate. They will definitely look out for each other, and the world around them and establish bonds of service and belongingness. They would understand the highs and lows of emotions and become more reflective. We would enthusiastically depend upon the co-operation from all the stakeholders in outlining and achieving short term, medium term, and long term goals. All the stakeholders would co-operate to ensure an environment of commitment. Every effort would be taken to introduce our students to a landscape of fresh possibilities and provide an 'entrepreneur' into a world that is waiting and watching.

We wish to be equitable and inclusive in every future endeavor and establish PGDAV as an institution of eminence. In consonance with the ideals of NEP we envision a multimodal approach. Major changes are coming in the next few years. We would be more accountable to the students and deliver employability, nurture innovation and creativity. Our college will promise to be an exciting place as we plan to use high-tech software and gadgets. Artificial intelligence, augmented reality and virtual reality have immense potential to communicate knowledge. We promise to see that all our computers run latest software products. Additional resources such as printers and internet connectivity with a stronger bandwidth will also be provided. We also propose to create an energy efficient campus similar to a modern green building. Energy saving infrastructure and introduction of cutting-edge technologies would help reduce the energy consumption and potable water considerably.

As the library is at the center of academic life, our library is rich in extraordinary facilities. We propose to cater to all the students through our computers that would help in completing assignments and all academic requirements.

It is very sincerely believed that the more a student indulges in fine arts, sports etc. the more engaging their life becomes. We wish to redefine the experiential aspects of sports by appointing a female coach and also providing nutritional snacks to students on field. Our vigilant training and placement cell is growing stronger with each coming year. As an initiative to make the environment eco-friendly we intend to make the first day of every month fuel free.

We are also trying to strengthen our financial services department comprising of experienced financial advisors who would help students get student loans from banks and any other financial institutions. We propose to devote space to an inhouse gallery or a museum of Art. We plan to offer a venue where all the craftwork, artwork and creativity of students can be showcased. This college art gallery could be a representative voice of students. We intend to ensure that the available infrastructure is optimally utilized.

We also propose to next rely on solar energy only for all our energy requirements because of the current climate crises. Solar paneling as a natural resource is the answer to sustainable practices and conservation. We look forward to creating Audio-Visual class rooms and resource rooms to facilitate better learning. Technology is the back bone of any college and practical exposure brings real value to the degree. We wish to create discipline-based laboratory for study and research. A multimedia English language lab is surely in pipeline which would be equipped with sophisticated software to train all our students in the communicative aspects of English. We have earnestly planned to run an institution bus that would pick and drop students to all the important drops in Delhi. These buses would also be available for conducting industrial tours, educational excursions and visits etc. Taking into consideration the eating habits of students and unhealthy fast foods, we reinvent canteen menu to make the food wholesome and packed with nutrition. The college management is also thinking of building a girl's hostel as a safe hostel is a hallmark of a reputed institution.

We at PGDAV are bound to create culturally inclusive classrooms free from racism, sexism and ethnic prejudice. Times are changing and we strongly believe that college education is not learning of many facts but the training of the mind to think. We would struggle to infuse new life, new energy, and new direction as far as the future of PGDAV is concerned. We promise to be instrumental in launching newer dimensions, newer programs and newer streams to our institution. We ideate to break old molds and thus add dignity and wholesomeness to every student's life.
